

MILK PRICE REACHED AT CONFERENCE; DIXON PRODUCERS DELIVER

No Diminution of Supply
Delivered to Local Factory During Day.

OFFICERS IN THE CITY

J. C. Wadsworth and Charles Leake Go to Chicago to Study Situation.

The price of $3.50 per hundred-weight for milk delivered to the Borden Milk factory during February, as announced by the local factory officials late yesterday afternoon, following receipt of instructions from the head offices of the company, was 20 cents per hundred less than the producers had expected through the Co-Operative Marketing Co.; but the price was agreed upon at the last of a series of conferences between producers and distributors of the Chicago district yesterday, and there has been no diminution in the amount of milk delivered to the Dixon factory today by producers of the Dixon district.

J. C. Wadsworth and Chas. Leake of the Dixon Milk Producers Association, following conferences with local producers last night, went to Chicago this morning to get first hand information of the conferences held yesterday and to ascertain the outlook for the future marketing of milk.

Charge Exorbitance.
The milk producers, according to a report from Chicago, were alleged to have undertaken, through the Co-Operative Marketing Co., to have required the distributors to make six months' contracts for their milk supply at a graduated price, beginning with $3.70 per hundred pounds in February.

The price of $3.70 was objected to by the distributors on the ground that it was exorbitant and entirely out of line with the butter and cheese market. It would be equal, they claimed, to more than $1 per pound for butter.

SAY PRICE IS LESS THAN PRODUCTION COST.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—A drop in the price of milk for February from $3.76 a hundred pounds to $3.50 was announced yesterday by the Milk Producers' association as the result of an all day conference with distributors. The producers asked $3.70 for this month, but had to make a concession of 20 cents. This will not affect the retail price of milk.

A deadlock was threatened between producers and distributors early in the day. The farmers in the Chicago milk district stood ready to withhold shipments of milk unless they were guaranteed what they considered a fair price.

The drop in the price of butter and cheese was given by Secretary W. J. Kittle of the Producers' association as the reason for the lower sale price by the farmer. The surplus supply of milk in the hands of the producers had to be taken into consideration in the bargaining. Feed prices have also gone down. The price of $3.50 a hundred pounds is less than the cost price of production, according to the government formula, based on December feed prices.

GERMANY MAY RECEIVE PEACE TERMS IN FEB.

May Accompany Details for Extension of Armistice —Study Plans.

Paris, Feb. 1.—Preliminary peace terms will probably go to Germany along with the conditions for a further renewal of the armistice this month if present plans are not deranged.

Some of the delegates who have been closely studying the situation, believe the armistice might well be developed into a peace treaty, just as they think the Society of Nations will develop from the deliberations of the peace congress.

President Wilson is known to have examined this view and to have contemplated its possibility.

No Statement On "Compromise Plan"

Paris, Feb. 1.—There has been no official statement of the "compromise plan" for the government of the German colonies by mandates, but it is understood the use of the word "colonies" will not limit the scope of the plan for the former German colonial possessions, but may include Mesopotamia, Armenia and the Palestine.

The Chinese and Japanese claims to Tsing-Tao, it is understood, will be left for adjustment to the league of nations, and it is probable the same order will prevail concerning Dalmatia and Albania, of which Italy and Jugo Slavia are at odds.

Former Dixonite.

HIGHLY RESPECTED

Attorney John J. Armstrong will leave this evening for Terry, Mont., on legal business connected with the affairs of his brother, Attorney William G. Armstrong, who passed away last Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock. The Prairie County Messenger, published at Terry, contains the following account of the former Dixon man's passing:

Mr. Armstrong was taken to the detention hospital the first of the week suffering with what appeared to be the flu, but a more thorough examination revealed the trouble to be an abscess of the ear, affecting the brain. The direct cause of death was septicemia, resulting from the abscess. Physicians were summoned from Miles City in consultation with the local doctor, and everything possible was done to preserve his life, but without avail.

Word was sent to his old home at Dixon, Ill., of the serious nature of his illness and a brother, John, started for Terry, but did not reach there until Saturday evening, nearly twelve hours after the death of Mr. Armstrong had occurred.

Funeral services were held from the Catholic church Sunday conducted by Rev. Fr. Sheehy of Miles City. The services were very largely attended for every one who knew Mr. Armstrong was his devoted friend. The pall bearers were all Knights of

New York, Feb. 1.—Carl Kling, of Dixon, Ill., whose father, E. L. Kling, is a jeweler, has just arrived from France. Kling gave up his studies in the University of Illinois to do his duty overseas. He is now in Debarkation Hospital No. 3 in this city, recovering from a wound over the left eye caused by a fragment of high explosive shell. Telling of the part Illinois had in the breaking of the backbone of the German offensive, he said:

"We sailed Oct. 18th, 1917, and reached St. Nazaire a week later. The 149th Regiment, 42nd div. in which I was telephone man in the Headquarters Company was sent to train three months in the mud at Brittany near Rennes. We were then sent to Lunerville in Alsace to hold the trenches, under the direction of the 47th French Artillery the crack regiment of the Allies. It was here that my duties were shown and their difficulty tested.

Maintained Lines.
I had to see that the telephone wires between the artillery and the infantry were intact and continually adjusted to the advancing line. We moved so fast that this alone would make a job for a corps. We were under continual shell fire that every day tore our carefully laid line to pieces, and the artillery was put out of connection with the infantry, and had to rely on runners. This gave me an idea of the job in front of me. We stayed in this sector for three

Their bodies were found late yesterday afternoon by Long Li, a fellow student of Hsie and Wu at the George Washington university, who called to see why the two men had been absent from class.

The only clue thus far discovered has been given by Li, who told the officers of a Chinaman, who had met him at the door of the house when he called Wednesday evening, and who told him that the men were not at home. It is believed the three were killed Wednesday. There was not attempt at robbery.

MAJOR CASUALTY LIST

Total of 56,592 Major Casualties Are Reported—Demobilization Plans.

Washington, Feb. 1.—An official tabulation of the casualties by divisions of the American Expeditionary Forces, 95 per cent complete, to date was made public today by the war department. The totals for all divisions, exclusive of two regiments of marines with the Second division, are:

Killed in action, 27,762.
Died of wounds, 11,396.
Prisoners, 2,785.
Making a grand total of major casualties, of 56,592.

Illinois Guard Losses.
The major casualties of the First and Second divisions, first and longest at the front, head the list with 8,213. The 33rd division (Illinois National Guard) had 1,171 major casualties and the 42nd division (Rainbow), 2,930.

The tables were given out under the following heading:

"The following pages contain certain major casualties reported through January 10. They give totals of casualties which put a soldier permanently out of action, and do not include wounded."

Demobilization Proceeds.

The demobilization of the army passed the million mark during the week, Gen. March, chief of staff, announced during the day, 51,237 officials and 952,411 men having actually been discharged. Of the officers mustered out, 2,444 were on duty in Washington.

The demobilization has proceeded to such a point that general officers are being discharged. Gen. March announced the honorable discharge of thirty-three generals, all except four being regulars who were returned in regular service.

The total number of men ordered for early discharge is 1,336,000 including 153,000 who have actually returned from overseas.

Pershing Denies Disorders.
Gen. Pershing in an official telegram to Secretary of War Baker characterizes sensational reports in French newspapers of assaults and burglaries in Paris by American soldiers as "gross exaggerations."

The number of crimes by American soldiers has been almost negligible considering the large number of men in the vicinity. Gen. Pershing says, and he recommends that a full refutation of the charges be put before the American public.

Since the signing of the armistice, Gen. Pershing's report adds, Paris has offered many attractions to men mischievously and criminally inclined which has resulted in minor disturbances, but the American military police organization is excellent and disorders have been kept at a minimum.

SOLDIERS' LETTERS

Extracts of letters from Harland Hyde, with the army of occupation, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hyde:
Walterdingen, Luxemburg,
Nov. 24, 1918.

Dear Dad:

Have been busy moving during the past week so had no time to write, but seeing that today is "Dad's Christmas Letter Day," I will endeavor to tell you a little of what I have been doing since I left New York.

To start with I left Hoboken on the good ship Adriatic, manned by an English crew. Had fine accommodations on the boat, but the English food and I could not agree.

The next place we hit was Halifax. We were there three days, on the boat all the time, but saw the damage done to the town when the munition boat blew up. Also saw the Belgian relief boat that was wrecked there.

Left Halifax with twelve other boats, including a warship and an armored ship. We met eight destroyers about two days out from Liverpool, but did not see any sign of a U-boat. Reached Liverpool Feb. 16.

Saw General Pershing at Rougemont. While there, being a motorcycle rider, had a fine chance to see the nearby country. From one of our observation posts I saw the big city of Mulhouse, which was then in German hands.

Was in Chateau Thierry on July 27th. Left there with the advance party for Joulgonne and that night experienced my first air raid. They don't appeal to me at all. While riding out of Le Charnel was under terrific shell fire and machine gun fire. The rest will come later.

Last night I visited the city of Luxemburg. Had a fine time and a good feed.

The following letter was received by W. H. Hardesty from his son Guy, of the 123rd F. A., now stationed at Saucourt, France:
Saucourt, France,
Nov. 24, 1918.

Hello, Dad:

Today is Father's Day, so I guess I will write you a few lines. I will try to give you an outline of my trip since I left Camp Logan the first of June.

We left Camp Logan, coming to Camp Merritt by the way of Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, Canada, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Arriving at Camp Merritt about the 4th of June we stayed there about ten days and then sailed for France the night of the 14th. Was on the water eleven days.

The eighth day out the ship Crownland which was the one I was on, broke down and it was ten hours before we got under way again. It happened some time before dark but of course we never did catch up with the rest of the boats again.

All of the twenty-fifth of June we sailed along the coast of France. On the 26th we landed at St. Nazaire. We were there a short time, then the bunch split up. The doughboys went but we stayed three days longer; then our traveling orders came.

We went to LaCourtine to the F. A. R. R., then we got assigned to the 147th F. A. for drill. We had to hike up the mountains to the range, and believe me, it was some hike. We were at La Courtine until after July 14th when we entrained for Orman.

That was where I saw Peter Phalen. Then we went across country by truck to Voldhou, left there for Etrey when I joined old Battery C once more (about July 21st), stayed at Etrey a couple of weeks then marched to Voldhou, stayed about four weeks, then marched to Besancon, which took us two days. Then we entrained for the front; leaving the train at Foug we hiked across the country to Bohnville, where our guns were pulled into position for the first time. The weather was so disagreeable we could hardly work but we got through all O. K.

On the night of the 12th of September about 10:30 o'clock, we had a phone line go out and it was a job to locate it, believe me. We had three men out looking for the trouble. No one knew where the line ran but it was finally located and fixed. On our way back to the post of command the opened up with the big guns and, believe me, I never heard any noise equal to that. The flashes of the guns lit up the sky so you would have thought it was either sunrise or sunset. After twelve hours of continuous firing, we made our advance on Metz.

Our next position was in the ruins of the village of Zebra where we stayed for about 72 hours without firing a shot; then we pulled out for the Verdun front. After about three weeks of hiking and resting we found ourselves in the first position of the Argonne section of that sector. Three days later we made our first advance in the Argonne and had the pleasure of seeing German prisoners coming in by the hundreds.

In our next move, another advance, we tasted our first shell fire, which kept us busy ducking to save our necks. That was where our boys got their guns into position under heavy fire, and never left them after they were in position and they got tasted to work, although high explosives fell within fifteen feet of our position. Here is where we saw some of the most wonderful flying there ever was. Even if they were our enemy, the Germans do know how to handle the planes in the air.

We left our position on the Argonne, Oct. 15th, for a rest camp which was at "Ville," sure some camp, where we stayed for three weeks, then entrained at Souley for Saucourt, where we are at present.

I guess this is enough, so I will close, hoping this finds you as it leaves me, all O. K.

Love to all,
GUY.

P. S. Had a letter from Delbert Rinehart the other day.

Written by Eustace C. Wilson, Battery C, 123 H. F. A., A. E. F., to his father, Thomas Wilson, 1512 First St., this city:
Saucourt, France,
Nov. 24th, 1918.

Dear Dad and Family:

As today is the day to write to our dads, why I will drop you a few lines to let you know that everything is all right with me and all the other lads who are with me from Dixon.

I was very much pleased to receive a letter from you and mother and Phyllis which was dated Oct. 24th and which I got about three days ago. The family is certainly scattered out now, but let's hope it won't be long before we are all together again. Leslie and Hubert will get a little taste of army life and that will do them good for a change. Anyway they won't need to spend a long time in the service like I had. I know you will certainly have had a few shots at ducks this fall, but it's mighty expensive shooting. I'm sure glad to know that you are making good at your new machine, which will bring you bigger pay as time goes. And even though I'm a good many thousands of miles away from home I think more of the old burg than ever before and Illinois is good enough for anybody to live in.

Well, Dad, to talk about the war a little now. I sure am longing for the big day to come when we step off our ship onto the good old soil of America and start in a direct line for Dixon. We took the "long, long trail" over and I guess we will take it back the same way we came, but it's not going to be long, and "the long, long trail" will have ended as quickly as it commenced. Now I wrote home a whole lot about what I have been doing in other letters but in this letter to you I am going to recall some of the places we went through and the battles I have been lucky to get out of without a scratch. We landed at Liverpool, Eng., and from there we landed in Southampton, which is a wonderful dockyard. Here we saw the big ocean liners being repaired after being torpedoed and many boats lay out in the harbor waiting the chance to be repaired and put into shape again. I talked with one of the shipyard hands and he showed me one big boat which had been repaired and had just been at sea for about seven hours and the submarine just planted two more torpedoes in her and crippled her up for about five months in the dry dock again. From Southampton we left for Le Havre, France, which took about four hours to make. Of course, here was a dangerous part of our trip, but the good seamen and the vigilance of the navy kept the submarine in hiding the biggest part of the time. Airships are also employed in tracing the subs.

We camped at Havre one night and left for a village about twenty miles from the Swiss border over by Besancon. There we received some swift training on the French 155 mm. and six weeks later departed for the front on the Toul sector. Here we had our first experience with the Boche and we also prepared for the big drive of St. Mihiel, the first American drive, and surely had plenty of the mud and shells and also got to see the American and Boche aviators try their luck at shooting down the observation balloons which are the chief means of accurate artillery firing. Here I saw for the first time my own comrades wounded and killed whom I had known for many months while in the training camps and elsewhere.

We advanced and followed the Boche quite a number of miles and of course, got a chance to see where and how he fought and furthermore we got a look at what our own artillery had done. The place was just blown to hell for acres and acres and not a living soul could stand the terrific bombardment which was started at 1 o'clock on the morning of the 12th of September and kept up until 12:45 that afternoon. A continuous fire of 11 hours and 45 minutes and that surely meant heaps of manual labor to keep those six-inch howitzers belching their hail of explosives over to the Boche. But we would have kept it up for a week if necessary to move the confounded Hun. We then left the battle area of St. Mihiel and marched overland to the Argonne front which was something like 60 miles from our last battle grounds. Here we started a fine big barrage on the morning of the 26th of September at 5:30 in the morning which lasted about seven hours. We backed up the Ninetieth division in the battle for about four days and then the boys of the first division relieved the ninetieth division. The 58th brigade of artillery was, highly commended by the men from the first division and we kept right on with them for eleven more days. And the first division has a grand bunch of fighting men and the 58th brigade is sure glad to know that they fought side by side with old veterans like them. Then the Thirty-second division from Wisconsin and Michigan, relieved from the front for a rest the Illinois regiments of the 33rd division also saw some very active service up here in the Argonne. This is only a brief tale of what I know of the fighting and I sure hope to soon be back where I can sit and talk it all over with you, Dad.

About the 12th of October we were relieved from the front for a rest which we very badly needed, as our horses were all killed up in the Argonne we were motorized and while we were just receiving our motors and instruction the armistice was signed which ended all of the killing of more humans and brought us the big victory which we all meant to reach if it took every man.

Now I think my letter is about finished and remember me to all my old friends such as Strubens, Richies, Coverts, Kents, Wards, and a score of other good friends. By the time you receive this letter I expect to be moved again. At present we are at a small rest center called Saucourt. It is in the Marne valley and south of Verdun about a hundred miles from Paris. I got a glimpse of the Eiffel tower when going through France to our first training camp. Now I am closing with my best love to you and all the family. I will write to them soon. Hope they get my souvenirs, the silk handkerchiefs.

As ever, your loving son,
CYRIL.

P. S. The souvenir is a shoulder strap taken from a Hun prisoner on the St. Mihiel salient. He belonged to the 15th Infantry regiment. In fact he was a machine gunner. He said he was surely glad to be captured.

EVENING TELEGRAPH'S WEEKLY FASHION LETTER

New York, Jan. 30, 1919.
The warm breezes of the southland beckon and the chilled mortals of the north heed. Every train brings to the sunny south those who would be comfortable during the cold wave. And as comfort is largely a matter of clothes, the trip affords for the woman an excellent opportunity to rebuild her wardrobe which, perhaps, has been neglected during the war. What is worn at Palm Beach is always a forecast of what will be worn in New York for the late spring and early summer. All the pretty light things that are now shown for southern wear will be the very same in design and line that those who remain at home will don as soon as the temperature permits. Wise, indeed, is she who takes advantage of the sales at the shops of this flimsy material now, for she has a wider selection, and the quantity being more abundant will make the material cheaper in price.

It is safe to say that any design which is copied from the models now will be very smart next summer. And, therefore, to stock up now would be far more discreet than rushing as the majority will be, in the hot summer days. Many novel styles of course, that could not be worn about town are shown, but the discretion of the average woman may be relied on sufficiently to warrant her correct choice.

Extreme But Charming.
One of the shops is showing a dainty little hat developed in raspberry dotted dimity with a parasol to match. The crown of the hat is slightly shirred and a coy little rose of raspberry colored satin rests confidently on the brim over the right eye. The handle of the parasol is ivory and the mate of the satin rose on the hat is vainly, pursuing its companion, for it is stopped abruptly about two-thirds of the way up the handle by a hand-painted ring of ivory. The attractive set can well be

LETTER FROM LEWIS.
Mr. Ephraim Horner today received a letter from Ira W. Lewis, Headquarters Company, 123rd Field Artillery, in France, written the day before Christmas, in which he says that the sun is shining brightly but that the air is chilly. He says the weather has been very rainy, but that the coldest weather has only amounted to heavy frosts. He states that imagined shading the hot rays from some pretty thing who was just made for raspberry dotted dimity. Georgette dresses seem to be favored. Pale shades, such as flesh and robin's egg blue with white in the lead, are most numerous. Many of these frocks are embroidered elaborately with beads of contrasting colors. The lines are simple and the unsophisticated appearance of the soft mass of material is fascinating.

The Successor of Khaki-Kool.

A new novelty weave is on the market which resembles very strongly the khaki-kool of last season. The material is silky in its composition, but has a surface which is made rough by the irregular lines of silk of various thicknesses running through it. This is used for the new suit dress. This ultra smart mode is extensively in view, and there is no doubt that a woman of refined taste will admire it for it is simple and serviceable.

For Velvet or Satin.

Then there is the lingerie to be considered. Point d'Esprit, which is hand embroidered with silk floss and sometimes combined with Georgette, is popular. The craze for embroidery extends from the tip-top of the parasol to the alluring envelope chemise. Sometimes it is silk, sometimes worsted, and many times woolen beads.

Rose Point and Venetian Lace.
For breakfast coats and boudoir use, lace is in demand. A gorgeous thing of heavy Venetian, with bits of Georgette of a flesh tint slipped in, makes a breakfast jacket fit for a queen, but worn by a queenly American woman.

The vest of the satin dress illustrated could be made of lace if desired or the guimpe of the overdress might show bits of flesh through the screen-like mesh of some delicate lace. The satin frock features the one-sided drapery and rather extreme narrowness at the lower edge.

his company was to move to about 100 miles further north very soon and extends best regards to his friends in Dixon.

Altman of an engineers' corps. The former wrote on Jan. 2nd, the first letter received by his parents since the middle of December. Both are in the best of health. Captain Altman has re-enlisted in the Federal Army for continued service in Europe.

VICTORY BALL A SUCCESS.
There is no question of the huge success of the Victory Ball, given by a committee of business men last evening at Rosbrook hall. The hall was crowded throughout the evening as every one was anxious to give the returned soldiers and sailors a real welcome—in fact, too crowded for comfort in dancing, but every one made the best of that. The crowd was one of the merriest mood and the scene a gay one, each individual wearing a Victory cap. The hall, itself, had never looked better than in its gala dress of flags and gay lanterns. Music, with just that fascinating allure that leads on to the dance, was furnished by the Marquette orchestra of seven pieces. The canteen, arranged to look the bona fide Red Cross canteen, all in white with Red Crosses, was a popular place during the evening and quantities of doughnuts, cheese and hot coffee were dispensed. Mrs. George Massee was chairman of the canteen committee, Mrs. Willard Thompson of decorations, and Miss Nina DePuy had charge of the hat booth. An aeroplane, for sale, was purchased by Wilbur Leake. There were probably 175 couples on the dance floor, and many spectators, making the very respectable admission fund of about $200. This will be used as the nucleus of a fund for a sailors' and soldiers' club room.

OLD FASHIONED PARTY.
Last evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hintz, Brookside farm, was the scene of a very happy gathering in honor of their thirtieth wedding anniversary. The friends arrived at "early candle light," as the invitations read, to the number of about fifty. The house was softly illuminated with candles, the decorations consisting of beautiful potted plants and pictures of the friends of long ago held prominent places throughout the rooms. The guests on their arrival, dressed in old fashioned costumes, were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Hintz. After greetings had been exchanged supper was announced. This consisted of old as well as new dishes. Never before had Mrs. Hintz prepared a more excellent repast of good things as was prepared for this supper. There was everything from escalloped chicken to pumpkin pie and doughnuts. After the supper a program was enjoyed in which everyone took part, some giving recitations, others songs, charades, conundrums, etc. Mrs. and Mrs. Hintz were then asked to be seated together and a handsome rocking chair was presented them by Robert Anderson as an appreciation of their hospitality and of remembrance from their many friends. At the close of Mr. Anderson's talk and the responses by Mr. and Mrs. Hintz, the guests were assembled in the parlor where a flash light picture was taken. On Feb. 1st the guests departed, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hintz many more years of happiness.

The Promoter's Wife

By JANE PHELPS

NEIL TELLS BARBARA OF HIS LOVE.

CHAPTER VI.
I have been thus particular to tell of my simple home life, so that it may perhaps win me, if not forgiveness for what came after, at least some sort of understanding of my foolishness, my mistakes. For I was also to blame for what happened.

I wanted desperately to go to the station to meet Neil, that lovely May day when he was to arrive, but he had said nothing of my doing so in his letter, so I remained at home, anxiously watching from the window, shaded by the curtains.

My heart almost literally leaped into my mouth when I saw him swing up the street, carrying his big suit case as if it weighed no more than a feather. Neil was very strong; he had gone in for athletics in college, and had been very proud of his record.

He turned into his aunt's gate, and my heart went back where it belonged again. But in less than fifteen minutes he was with me.

"How do you do, Bab?" was what he said, but the way he held both my hands and the glad look in his eyes, made it adequate. Moth was with us, or I thought he perhaps might have kissed me.

He was to remain less than a week. I almost cried when he told me. But I was so happy that he was with me, that I determined to try and forget how soon he would leave me again.

"You see I had to come, Bab," he said later in the evening when we took a long walk, just the same as we did the summer before.

"You had to come," I repeated wondering.

"Yes, I had to see if you were still here."

"Why, you knew I was. Haven't I written you regularly?"

"Yes, but somehow I wanted to look at you, Bab, to see if I had idealized you too much; or if you were far ahead of all I thought you."

"Well?" I laughed nervously as I asked the question.

"Miles ahead, Bab. I don't believe there is another girl in the world like you. You are very pretty too, Bab. Did you know that? Of course you did, you have a mirror. And Bab! you look very sweet in that pale blue dress; it is like a faint moonbeam, in this half light."

We talked a lot more nonsense, at least Neil did. I mostly listened.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.
Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Huguet today celebrated quietly their twentieth wedding anniversary.

ENTERTAIN IN STERLING.
Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Mangan, of Sterling, will entertain at dinner on Sunday, Casper Krug. Mrs. Claude Mangan, Miss Mabel Krug, and Eric Gerdes.

HONORED SOLDIER.
George Berard, recently returned from overseas service, was pleasantly welcomed by a company of friends who came to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Berard on Thursday evening, and gave him a surprise reception. Games of "500" and Victrola music made pleasant entertainment during the evening and tales of "over there" as told by Mr. Berard were sources of great interest. Refreshments were served.

FROM WEST BROOKLYN.
Misses Genevieve Lally and Marguerite Hersam, superintendent and principal of the West Brooklyn high school, were here to spend the week-end with their parents.

"PRACTICAL SURPRISE."
Mrs. L. B. Miller was more than surprised, she was almost frightened, when entering her darkened house last evening to find the lights suddenly flashed on and stories of burglaries sped through her mind. To find that it was the members of the Practical Club, bent on giving her a happy surprise, was indeed an intense relief. A most delicious scramble supper was served and a delightful social evening followed. Mrs. Miller's daughter, Mary Evelyn, assisted in entertaining the guests with music.

CAMP FIRE MEETING.
A meeting of the Misanakesiba Camp Fire girls will be held Monday evening with Miss Margaret Knick.

ST. JAMES AID.
A meeting of the St. James Aid Society will be held next Wednesday with Mrs. Frank Young and Miss Irene Young. Election of officers will be held and all the members are urged to attend. This is to be an afternoon meeting.

BE JOLLY CLUB.
A social evening and scramble supper will be enjoyed by the members of the "Be Jolly" club and their families at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Ritzner of Seventh St. on Wednesday evening. Each is to bring dishes sufficient for own family. Chicken pie will be a feature of the supper. A program of music will follow the supper.

Then when he left for the night he leaned over and kissed me once again on my cheek. Just a quick brushing of his lips across my face.

"You're a dear, Bab!" he said, and then I was alone.

But somehow I knew that Neil was beginning to love me. I felt no shame over that kiss as I had over the other. He had said loving things to me before he kissed me. I thrilled all over with the knowledge, and before I went to bed I knelt down and thanked God for Neil.

The days passed so swiftly that the day he was to leave, found me all unprepared to lose him. He had been tenderly lovable all the time. I think mother saw how things were drifting, for she made no demands upon me, and I had been constantly with Neil. He was to take a train about ten o'clock that connected with his train at the junction. We took a walk after dinner, but neither of us talked much. Without either scarcely realizing it, our steps turned to the wood at the end of the village, and we sat down on the log where Neil had given me his first kiss.

There he told me how dear I was to him, and asked me to be his wife. When I said "yes" he took me in his arms and told me of his love, how he had thought he would forget me, but had been unable to. How superior I was to all other girls, and all the other things which lovers say.

Then after a time when the first sweet emotion of our love had passed, he said:

"Come, dearest. We must go and tell your father and mother. I fear they will hate to give you to me, because I have to take you so far from them."

Father and mother weren't nearly as surprised as I thought they would be. They acted beautifully, and when Neil said he would like to be married in September, they gave their consent. Then until time for his train, we were alone again. I wept a few tears, but they were happy tears, and he wiped them away with kisses. Then father and I went to the station with him. I was not to see him again until he came for me in September.

I sometimes have wondered if—had I known the unhappiness, the agony I was to endure with Neil—I would have married him? Yet, knowing all as I now know it, I doubt if I would have had strength to give him up—my first lover, my Neil!

WORRIED OVER HAT

Legislators Must Solve Problem of Etiquette.

Rules Governing Procedure of British House of Commons Will Have to Be Radically Revised to Fit New Times.

Members of the British house of commons stand self-accused, and women are beginning to understand why there was so much opposition on the question of their being allowed to sit in parliament.

"The house of commons is not a fit and proper place for respectable women to sit in," said Sir Hedworth Mox, making a speech in regard to the proposal. "I oppose this resolution," he continued, "not because I do not love the female sex, but because I adore women. But is it a proper thing for women to be sitting here until 11 o'clock at night? When we sit until 2 and 3 in the morning the historic cry of 'Who goes home?' will become 'Who will take me home?'"

In the future the big strangers' gallery will be open to women as well as men, but the ladies' gallery will still continue to be restricted to the exclusive use of women, so that whatever of privileged sex position still remains in parliament will be to the advantage of the gentle sex. Thus are the tables turned.

Many amusing queries are being put to perplexed politicians. The concentrated wisdom of a thousand years has made rules, and the rules have been for men only.

One thing that becomes a problem is the etiquette of the hat. A rule in this connection is that if a member wishes to address the house he must remain "uncovered." Male members now have visions of the new woman member standing up and removing her latest Paris creation. Of necessity she must have a mirror to arrange her disheveled locks.

Another point of etiquette decrees that when rising to speak in debate the member must be "covered." Will she in her hurry grab the hat off the head of the nearest victim so as to be in order?

The hat problem becomes more and more complicated as matters proceed. When a member is referred to in a speech by another member—especially in the case of a compliment from a minister (and the male members gloomily foresee that women will get the lion's share of these)—he acknowledges it by raising his hat. By the time the female member has finished wrestling with half a dozen hampers the minister will be through with his compliment and on to the next subject for debate.

These, and other similar problems, are vexing political etiquette. What is going to happen to parliament if all the formalities and rules are to be swept away in a tempestuous whirl of petticoats? The honorable male members don't know—but the women declare the time thus saved will be spent in making common-sense laws for the good of mankind.

Gone West.
The phrase "gone west," used so much during the war, is not a new one in the language of the Maori, though he does not say it quite in that way. The Maori religion provides no such place as hell. A person gets his or her deserts in this life and afterward goes by "the broad path of Tane," i. e., the track of the setting sun, to a huge meeting place where are gathered the souls of all the departed. There they will wait till members of all the tribes and hapus and families who are still on earth have joined them, when all will move on to whichever heaven they are bidden to go. There are 12 heavens in the Maori's mythology. And the course which leads to any of them is the west.

Quinoa Substitute for Wheat.
There has long been cultivated on the west coast of South America a plant called "quinoa," which botanists and cereal experts believe may prove an excellent substitute for wheat, in fact preferable to the substitutes now in use, says the November Popular Mechanics Magazine. This plant, now attracting particular attention because of the shortage of foodstuffs, has been cultivated in South America in more or less primitive fashion, since pre-Inca days. The department of agriculture has imported several lots of quinoa seed and seed of related species, and is making experiments with it in the hope of finding suitable soil climate in this country for its growth.

Allies in Russia Are Driven Back By Attack

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Archangel, Friday, Jan. 31.—(Delayed)—Another violent attack by the Bolsheviks on the American, British and Russian positions at Tarsesevo yesterday compelled the hard-pressed and outnumbered little band of soldiers to withdraw 40 miles. Their new positions are at Srdmak-renga. The Bolshevik attack followed a bombardment in which gas, incendiary, shrapnel and high explosive shells were used. This was the first time gas shells have been employed in this northern warfare.

THE RIGHT MAN FOR THE RIGHT JOB.

In making your choice for commissioner of the city of Dixon at the approaching election, consider whether the candidate is particularly fitted to fill one of the administrative offices he seeks. Size them up and find a man who would make a good commissioner of finance, and vote for him. Decide who would make the best commissioner of Public Health and Safety, etc.

We have men in Dixon who are peculiarly fitted to best fill the job of commissioner of streets—men who have made a life long study of street building and repairing. One of them should be induced to become a candidate and the voters should elect him. Because a man has made a success selling goods does not argue that he would make an ideal street commissioner. We are too apt, in our elections, to vote men into office because they are handshakers and popular fellows, rather than because they are fitted for the job.

We have many men in Dixon who would make splendid mayors or commissioners of finance because of their long experience with banking or other business, but very likely they would be defeated at the polls if they were opposed by a popular politician, regardless of his ability, because of their inability or disinclination to get out and "mix" and beg for votes.

THE LUXURY TAX.

Some features of the proposed luxury tax in the tax measure before congress are stirring the clothiers of Dixon and other cities in the country to action. The bill proposes a ten per cent tax on many articles, such as hats, shirts, umbrellas, etc., when they cost above a certain price.

Dixon tax merchants have sent a joint message to congress protesting against this tax on articles which they believe are necessities rather than luxuries. Dixon people, too, should protest against this unfair tax, for it is the people who will have to pay it if it becomes a law. The manufacturer will add it to the price of his goods when he sells it to the jobber, the jobber will pass it on to the retailer, and the retailer will tack the extra ten per cent on the price of the hat or the shirt when you buy it.

Prices on wearing apparel are too high now. The cost of living should be coming down—not going up. Is it to pay the deficiency of the government railroad administration that we are asked to pay ten per cent more on a hat or a shirt?

SHALL SUBMARINES BE ABOLISHED?

The proposal that the submarine be universally abandoned as a war instrument, now under consideration at the peace conference, will probably strike most people favorably. Formerly, this craft was regarded with a sort of romantic admiration. But the hideous use of it made by Germany has made all its associations dark and ugly. Few but naval experts can think of it longer with any satisfaction. The general public unquestionably regards such vessels with aversion.

This attitude seems inevitable from the very nature of the submarine warship. If Germany had not written this repulsive chapter of naval history, it might have been written eventually, in its main outlines, by some other nation. For the essential characteristic of submarine warfare is assassination. Some of the newer and larger types have indeed battled on the surface, like the more chivalrous sort of warships; but such combat is, and would probably remain, exceptional. The nature of the sub-sea boat is to fight by stealth. Wherefore brave men condemn it and all men fear it.

The question, though, is not so simple as to be decided by sentiment alone. It is possible to make a good argument for the employment of submarines in a nation's own harbors and coastal waters for home defense. It will be interesting to see how the peace conference handles this point.

There may be a sound reason for it, but American people are having difficulty in understanding why American soldiers are being kept in Russia shooting down peasants and being shot down in turn. Granting, for the sake of argument, that the peasants ought to be shot, they are shooting at each other fast enough to satisfy anybody, and the salvation of the whole of Russia is not worth the lives of the Americans who are dying there.

A headline says butter, potatoes and eggs decline in price, and that the authorities are instituting an inquiry. For the love of Pete why didn't they inquire when they were going up? As long as they are going down we are not in favor of interfering.

After demon rum is out of business Billy Sunday will have to hunt a new job.

FOUND OLD INDIAN VILLAGE

Interesting Relics, Believed to Be Centuries Old, Recently Unearthed in New York State.

Relics of an Indian village, said to have its origin as early as 1575, have been discovered in Clason Point, the Bronx, according to an announcement made by the Museum of the American Indian, Heye foundation. The discovery was made by Alan B. Skinner, archeologist of the foundation. The discovery is regarded as a very important one by the members of the foundation. Research establishes that the village was probably inhabited by natives of the Siwanoy tribe, known to very early settlers as "Snakeskins."

The research, made through the kindness of a trustee of the foundation, has established to the satisfaction of the board that the tract remained in possession of its Indian inhabitants until 1625, when it was purchased by Robert Cornell, an Englishman. Cornell's family was later massacred by the barbarian tribe. During the attack he managed to make his escape on a Dutch ship.

Mr. Skinner was making a pleasure trip through Clason Point, which is somewhat of a summer resort, last July. He noticed very large oyster shells on a mound of sand and recognized them as Indian boundary line markings. He obtained permission from the owner of the land to make a search of the ground. To the surprise of the searchers, relics of Indian life were unearthed. Costumes, beads, cooking utensils and a complete hair dress of the Siwanoy tribe were discovered. Seventy lodge sites, containing hundreds of Indian implements and tools, were also dug up.

The collection contained crude harpoons, fishhooks, carved tortoise-shell cups, bodkins and decorated pottery. Hundreds of pipes and a beautiful mold jar were discovered intact, and all are being preserved for public exhibition when the museum opens. This history speaks of the Siwanoy practice of digging sand holes and placing large quantities of food and other offerings to the "Great Snake." It was announced at the museum that the relics will be placed on exhibition at the opening of the exhibit.

Opportunity Missed.

For several years it had been my custom to make a visit on Thanksgiving afternoon at the home of my most particular friend. This last Thanksgiving I missed, as the family was to attend the community singing at 4 p. m. A few days after little Katherine dropped in to see me and asked "Why didn't you come to see us on Thanksgiving?"

"Well," I replied, "you were not at home in the afternoon."

She then asked: "Why didn't you come earlier? Why not come for dinner?"

"But," I jokingly replied, "you didn't ask me."

"Well," she replied thoughtfully, "I think if you had come early and hung around they'd have asked you!"—Chicago Tribune.

Awaiting Instructions.

In a letter received from a cousin of mine, who is a lieutenant in the aviation service, he tells of the following incident that happened to a cadet flyer at Kelly field: The cadet was making his first solo flight and had been flying around the towers where the instructors sit and observe the movements of the solo flyers, when he was seen throwing something out of his plane. He had thrown his shoe out with a note tied to it saying that his "gun" or gas throttle was jammed, and he didn't know what to do. He flew around the towers ten times before he realized that he had a magneto switch on his plane that would shut off the ignition and thus stop the engine. He finally landed with a dandy "thump."—Chicago Tribune.

Conscience.

It was plain to be seen that Arthur, eight years old, had something on his mind. It was something that concerned Christmas and his neighbor, Jimmy. Finally he said to his mother: "I guess I'll give Jimmy his knife for Christmas."

"Have you Jimmy's knife?" the mother inquired.

"Yes, I found it a long time ago. He thinks it's lost. But findin' his knife, you know."

The mother made no comment, for she knew something else was coming.

And then her son said: "I might as well give it to him. I can't use it 'cause he's with me all the time."

Wheat Production.

Mean wheat production per acre in the 15 years, 1899-1913, was 42.5 bushels in Denmark, 35.4 bushels in Ireland, 35.1 bushels in Belgium, 31.5 bushels in Great Britain, 29.7 bushels in Germany, 20.2 bushels in France, 19.1 bushels in Austria, 18.1 bushels in Hungary, 16.7 bushels in Roumania, and 14.1 bushels in the United States. Bushels of measure are taken for Denmark, France, Great Britain, Ireland and Roumania; of 60 pounds for the other countries.

Family Prayers.

Nurse—James, did you know the angels have sent you another little brother?

James—Oh, bother; just ziff I don't have enough folks to pray for every night as it is.

His Species.

"Jims is a conceited man. He honestly believes he is the flower of his family."

"Well, he is their poppy, isn't he?"

It's New But It's Proven!

For several years, before we ever told the public a word about SALINOS, 25,000 doctors in all parts of the country tested it with splendid success. It is the ideal laxative because it combines all of the good effects of the three essential salts—Glauber's, Epsom and Rochelle,—and eliminates the bad effects, such as nauseating taste, insolubility in cold water, etc.

While it is new to the public it's proven! It is a thorough laxative that will completely empty the bowels, including the lower bowel where food-waste lies and ferments and fills the blood with dangerous poisons. It prevents this fermentation and thus helps to maintain the body's resistance to disease.

Get a bottle of SALINOS from your druggist for a Quarter (larger sizes Fifty cents and a Dollar). It is a fine thing to have handy. Get it. Be safe! Use SALINOS to-morrow morning.

CAPITAL AND LABOR IN ILLINOIS LINKED BY GOVERNOR LOWDEN

Lowden Conference Results in Remarkable Results to State.

LABOR HEADS PLEASED

Employers Are Also Grati- fied at Good Results of Conference.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 1.—“The Illinois idea” of adjustment of differences between organized labor and organized capital was established yesterday. Gov. Lowden acted as moderator over a joint conference of representatives of employers and employees that may become historical in its later developments.

During a nine hour conference that was held behind closed doors the responsible spokesmen for the industries of Chicago, and the downstate and the official representatives of union labor talked “cold turkey.”

Here’s Perkins’ View.

George W. Perkins, president of the International Cigar Makers, probably expressed the net result more readily than anyone else when he made this statement to the newspaper representatives following the adjournment of the conference:

“Not in twenty-five years of actual experience have I participated in discussions that will mean so much eventually to the state and nation. We may expect as an immediate result a program of action that will carry us through this period of transition from war to peace. We have threshed over problems that are on the high road to adjustment here in Illinois. The two elements never were in a more strategic position to reach an agreement than tonight.”

Pelouze Is Gratiified.

Col. William Nelson Pelouze, vice president of the Illinois Manufacturers’ association, as the chairman of his group, listened to Mr. Perkins’ statement, made in the presence of Governor Lowden.

“I acquiesce in the remarks of Mr. Perkins,” Col. Pelouze said. “We have established a working basis that is to be the foundation upon which the most substantial results can be constructed.”

It was left to Gov. Lowden to issue the formal statement that represented the concrete thought of the conference. Gov. Lowden, in substance, put out the platform upon which labor and capital will attempt to agree in going through with the problems of reconstruction and rehabilitation that confront city and state.

Statement by Lowden.

Gov. Lowden’s statement was as follows:

“The Illinois State Federation of Labor at its recent meeting appointed a committee upon the problems of reconstruction. The Illinois Manufacturers’ association shortly afterwards appointed a like committee. These committees were composed in each instance of representative men of the respective organization. I asked these men to meet jointly with me here.

“We went into session at 10 o’clock and have been in session all day. Every one was asked to speak candidly whatever was in his mind. The idea I have had with reference to the subject was that if we are to meet the problems and difficulties of the future the old isolation of employer on the one hand and employee on the other must be broken down.

Personal Contact Urged.

“Most of the differences of honest men result from mutual misunderstanding, and these misunderstandings can be cleared up only by personal contact and personal discussion. When men gather around the same table, and strive honestly to reach some common ground of understanding, they rarely fail. This was proven by the experience of our state council of defense.

“Representatives of labor and representatives of capital met in that body for the first time, became acquainted with one another, with the result that the records of that body do not disclose a single divided vote upon any question considered by it. If, as it seemed to me, that could be accomplished by that body, why it is not time for a larger body, composed equally of representatives of the employer and representatives of the employee, to get similarly together, look into one another’s faces and discuss the whole industrial question from their own viewpoint.

Find Rallying Point.

“And the experience in this session lasting during the day has persuaded me that the thing is entirely practical. I do not expect that all differences between these respective committees will disappear, but I do expect that they will be reduced in number and seriousness, and that a common rallying point will be found by these men whenever industrial troubles arise.

“It was realized by all that the first and most essential thing is to stimulate the ordinary, every day industries, so that the problem of unemployment that may be met. While all agree that public work could help considerably, still the private, ordinary industry must be run, if conditions of employment are to become satisfactory.

Confidence in Future.

“It was also agreed that the first condition to the return of more activity in industry was increased confidence in the future. That confidence it was believed would be greatly strengthened if the employer were to have a better knowledge of one another and a better understanding of one another.

“The meeting adjourned with the determination on the part of both sides, if I am any judge, to work out together the problems of reconstruction and will meet again at an early date.

“FRANK O. LOWDEN.”

weeks, then moved to Bacarat, in Lorraine, where we stayed for two months, meeting only with occasional raiding parties. When we made a raid our barrage was so dense that we took few prisoners, finding most of the Germans dead, having been killed by our gun fire. Thoroughly seasoned for our task we were then moved to the Suppe sector on the Champagne front, where we were under the direction of Gen. Gouraud of the 4th French Army, the only American division having the honor. There we experienced some great difficulty in adjusting our wires. On the morning of July 15th, American intelligence men learned of the great German offensive set for midnight. 15 minutes before that time fire was opened with ever increasing force.

Right On Schedule.

The great German barrage then opened on schedule time, just at midnight. Both lines were in semi-circular position and there was a giant circle of continued flame and the roar was so great that a 77 nearly was shooting all the time without our knowing it. Veterans of all drives said that that fire was the greatest that the war had seen, and it became famous as the million dollar barrage. Our detachment was camouflaged and suffered comparatively few casualties, but the wires were all cut to pieces. The Germans advanced 200 yards and then retreated. That broke their attempt at attacking, and incidentally their entire western offensive. During that offensive the New York and Alabama regiments, the 165th and 167th were merged with the French Chasseurs for tactical purposes. Where I was, German dead were piled up four and five deep, while American casualties were extremely light.

Good Friend Killed.

“A good friend of mine, Lieut. Cowan of North Shore, Chicago, was killed here. He was standing with two French officers when a 77 shell exploded in front of them. Cowan was killed but the French were untouched. There an American plane destroyed four enemy balloons in one afternoon. There were other exciting air battles at one time. In a flight in midheaven, two enemy planes were brought down by our planes, while a third was downed by anti-aircraft guns, all three were falling at once. This ended the activity on the Champagne front and we were sent to Chateau Thierry sector. There the Americans advanced so fast that we had a hard time catching up with the wires. At the Ourcq river we relieved the 6th div. and went in hard fighting. We passed the river and advanced as far as Fere-en-Tardenois.

Forced to Withdraw.

“The Germans withdrew from that town, but shelled it heavily when we occupied it, so we withdrew. When they entered we bombarded it until they withdrew. The same round occurred, for four days until we flanked the town and took it for good. We then advanced further and took Fismes, but here the fighting was hard because of bad roads and guerrilla warfare. We worked all day, all night and the next day laying wires and when we caught up with the division we found that they had captured 5,000 prisoners and had made 15 miles. We closed up the salient and then dug in. This made my work easier and we perfected the wire system. We then moved to the Argonne where the casualties were even heavier than in Thierry. In the forest fighting the infantry would go first to find the location of the machine gun nests. Having placed them by being shot to pieces, they would phone over to the artillery headquarters which would put the nests under heavy gun fire. The thick underbrush made machine gun fighting easy, especially when the Germans made dug-outs of reinforced concrete for gunners. Then the infantry crawled over to the pill-boxes and tossed hand grenades into them, provided that the gunners did not see them first. We had worked hard and were sent into the reserve near Grandpre. There, while I was resting a high explosive shell burst near me and a fragment hit me above the left eye. I was immediately treated, but that eye is lost. I stayed in the hospitals there for months and then was sent over here. I am feeling in fine shape and am glad that I went over. I expect to see Dixon soon, but New York is all there, and the Red Cross is making it pleasant.”

ADJUDGED INSANE.

Miss Elsie Brooks of this city was today adjudged insane by a commission in the County Court and was taken to the Watertown hospital this afternoon for treatment.

ATTY. ARMSTRONG’S DEATH NOT DUE TO FLU

Columbus of which order the deceased was a member. An honorary escort of twenty knights were in attendance from Miles City, and the Modern Woodmen, of which Mr. Armstrong was also a member, attended in a body and marched in the procession. The remains were shipped to Dixon, Ill., on Milwaukee train No. 18, Sunday afternoon, for burial. The brother accompanied the remains on the long journey.

William G. Armstrong was born at Dixon, Illinois, on the 12th day of December, 1878. He lived and grew to manhood in that vicinity, receiving his preparatory education in the public schools of that state, and finally graduating from one of the better law schools of Illinois. After graduation, he became imbued with the western idea and after looking around for some time, located in North Dakota where he began the practice of his profession. In the fall of 1911 he came to Terry and though the town was small at that time, he saw the possibilities of rapid growth in the future, decided to locate here permanently, and in the years that have followed, built up a thriving law practice. His cardinal business principles were absolute, uncompromising honesty and a painstaking thoroughness. From the time of establishing his business here until his death, his business prospered, and he leaves a considerable amount of property. Besides the lucrative law practice, he had a half section of land on the north side of the Yellowstone river, where he kept a rapidly increasing herd of cattle, the pride of his possessions. He was interested in the Fillenworth addition to the town of Terry, owned the office buildings where he conducted his law business, owned two valuable lots in the original townsite of Terry, near the school house, and was interested in other business.

When the movement for the creation of Prairie county was started, Mr. Armstrong did yeoman service in that cause and was elected the first county attorney of the county. At the end of his term of office he declined to run for a second term. In the field of politics he was an uncompromising Democrat of the better school and was always active in the cause of his friends in official life.

Deceased leaves an aged mother, three sisters, and three brothers all of whom reside at or in the vicinity of Dixon, Ill.

We cannot command words to fittingly express the sturdy, upstanding honesty of the deceased. To know him well was to realize this trait of character. As an attorney he was not to be swerved from his conception of right and justice by quibble or expediency. As a friend, he will be remembered as a steadfast, well-wisher, always the courteous, considerate gentleman, ever ready to sacrifice himself for the welfare of his friends. The writer enjoyed the honor of being considered his friend and deems it a high privilege to pay just tribute to the many excellent qualities and estimable character of the deceased, as well as to publicly acknowledge his high attainments. We shall miss his kindly humor, his personal interest and his sound advice. Suffice it to say that he was a valued friend.

To those near and dear to him there is the consolation that his life was lived, cleanly, honestly and in the love and fear of God. In the final summing up of things in the land beyond, all will be well with him. We bid him this earthly farewell in the firm faith and hope that over there we shall meet him once more.

George Fruin will go to Prophetstown tomorrow for a day’s visit. His wife, who has been visiting there, will return with him.

THE CARBON GRANULES

That part of the telephone into which you talk through the mouthpiece is the transmitter. The wall just back of the mouthpiece is the diaphragm, to the rear of which is a small drum partly filled with carbon crushed to about the size of granulated sugar.

The functions of the granular carbon is to take sound vibrations from the diaphragm and send them out over the wires in varying impulses.

If the telephone stand is held in the hand and tipped downward as you talk, the voice will have a “far away” sound because the little granules in the drum fall away from the diaphragm.

If the desk stand is held above the lips and talked up to, the little granules “pack” between the diaphragm and the voice will sound muffled and thick to the listener.

Careful tests demonstrate that the transmitter will render the most efficient service when the telephone rests on a level surface and is stationary like a wall telephone.

Master and Friend.

Pitchoune, who might have been considered as one of the infinitesimal atoms in the economy of the universe, ran over the sands away from his master. He was an infinitesimal dot on the desert's face. He was only a small Irish terrier in the heart of the Sahara. His little wiry body and his color seemed to blend with the dust. His eyes were dimmed by hunger and thirst and exhaustion, but there was the blood of a fighter in him and he was a thoroughbred. Nevertheless, he was running away. It looked very much like it. There was no one to comment on his treachery; had there been, Pitchoune would not have run far.

It was not an ordinary sight to see on the Sahara—a small Irish terrier going as fast as he could.

Pitchoune ran with his nose to the ground. There were several trails for a dog to follow on that apparently unbroken page of desert history. Which one would he choose? Without a scent a dog does nothing. His nostrils are his instinct. His devotion, his faithfulness, his intelligence, his heart—all come through his nose. A man's heart, they say, is in his stomach—or in his pocket. A dog's is in his nostrils. If Pitchoune had chosen the wrong direction, this story would never have been written. Michette did not give birth to the sixth puppy, in the stables of the garrison, for nothing. Nor had Sabron saved him on the night of the memorable dinner for nothing.

With his nose flat to the sands Pitchoune smelt to east and to west, to north and south, took a scent to the east, decided on it—for what reason will never be told—and followed it. Fatigue and hunger were forgotten an hour after hour Pitchoune ran across the Sahara. Mercifully, the sun had been clouded by the precursor of a windstorm. The air was almost cool. Mercifully, the wind did not arise until the little terrier had pursued his course to the end.

There are occasions when an animal's intelligence surpasses the human. When, toward evening of the twelve hours that it had taken him to reach a certain point, he came to a settlement of mud huts on the borders of an oasis, he was pretty nearly at the end of his strength. The oasis was the only sign of life in five hundred miles. There was very little left in his small body. He lay down, panting, but his bright spirit was unwilling just then to leave his form and hovered near him. In the religion of Talmud dogs alone have souls.

Pitchoune panted and dragged himself to a pool of water around which the green palms grew, and he drank and drank. Then the little desert wayfarer hid himself in the bushes and slept till morning. All night he was racked with convulsive twitches, but he slept and in his dreams he killed a young chicken and ate it. In the morning he took a bath in the pool, and the sun rose while he swam in the water.

If Sabron or Miss Redmond could have seen him he would have seemed the epitome of heartless egoism. He was the epitome of wisdom. Instinct and wisdom sometimes go closely together. Solomon was only instinctive when he asked for wisdom. The epicurean Lucullus, when dying, asked for a certain Nile fish cooked in wine.

Pitchoune shook out his short hairy body and came out of the oasis pool into the sunlight and trotted into the Arabian village.

Fatou Anni parched corn in a brazier before her house. Her house was a mud hut with yellow walls. It had no roof and was open to the sky.

Fatou Anni was ninety years old, straight as a lance—straight as one of the lances the men of the village carried when they went to dispute with white people. These lances with which the young men had fought, had won them the last battle. They had been victorious on the field.

Fatou Anni was the grandmother of many men. She had been the mother of many men. Now she parched corn tranquilly, prayerfully. "Allah! that the corn should not burn! Allah! that it should be sweet! Allah! that her men should be always successful."

She was the fetish of the settlement. In a single blue garment, her black scrawny breast uncovered, the thin veil that the Fellahs wear pushed back from her face, her fine eyes were revealed and she might have been a priestess as she bent over her corn!

"Allah! Allah Akbar!" Rather than anything should happen to Fatou Anni, the settlement would have roasted its enemies alive, torn them in shreds. Some of them said that she was two hundred years old. There was a charmed ring drawn around her house. People supposed that if any creature crossed it uninvited, it would fall dead.

The sun had risen for an hour and the air was still cool. Overhead, the sky, unstained by a single cloud, was blue as a turquoise floor, and against it, black and portentous, flew the vultures. Here and there the sun-touched pools gave life and reason to the oasis.

Fatou Anni parched her corn. Her barbaric chant was interrupted by a sharp bark and a low pleading whine.

She had never heard sounds just like that. The dogs of the village were great wolflike creatures. Pitchoune's bark was angelic compared with theirs. He crossed the charmed circle drawn around her house, and did not fall dead, and stood before her, whining. Fatou Anni left her corn, stood upright and looked at Pitchoune. To her the Irish terrier was an apparition. The fact that he had not fallen dead proved that he was beloved of Allah. He was, perhaps, a genie, an afrit.

Pitchoune fawned at her feet. She murmured a line of the Koran. It did not seem to affect his demonstrative affection. The woman bent down to him after making a pass against the Evil Eye, and touched him, and Pitchoune licked her hand.

Fatou Anni screamed, dropped him, went into the house and made her ablutions. When she came out Pitchoune sat patiently before the parched corn, and he again came crawling to her.

The Arabian woman lived in the last hut of the village. She could satisfy her curiosity without shocking her neighbors. She bent down to scrutinize Pitchoune's collar. There was a sacred medal on it with sacred inscriptions which she could not read. But as soon as she had freed him this time, Pitchoune tore himself away from her, flew out of the sacred ring and disappeared. The he ran back, barking appealingly; he took the hem of her dress in his mouth and pulled her. He repeatedly did this and the superstitious Arabian believed herself to be called divinely. She cautiously left the doorstep, her veil falling before her face, came out of the sacred ring, followed to the edge of the berry field. From there Pitchoune sped over the desert; when he stopped and looked back at her, Fatou Anni did not follow, and he returned to renew his entreaties. When she tried to touch him he escaped, keeping at a safe distance. The village began to stir. Blue and yellow garments fluttered in the streets.

"Allah Akbar," Fatou Anni murmured, "these are days of victory, of recompense." She gathered her robe around her and, stately and impressively, started toward the huts of her grandsons. When she returned, eight young warriors, fully armed, accompanied her. Pitchoune sat beside the parched corn, watching the brazier and her meal. Fatou Anni pointed to the desert.

She said to the young men, "Go with this genie. There is something he wishes to show us. Allah is great. Go."

When the Capitaine de Sabron opened his eyes in consciousness, they encountered a square of blazing blue heaven. He weakly put up his hand to shade his sight, and a cotton awning, supported by four bamboo poles, was swiftly raised over his head. He saw objects and took cognizance of them. On the floor in the low doorway of a mud hut sat three little naked children covered with flies and dirt. He was the guest of Fatou Anni. These were three of her hundred great-grandchildren.

The babies were playing with a little dog. Sabron knew the dog but could not articulate his name. By his side sat the woman to whom he owed his life. Her veil fell over her face. She was braiding straw. He looked at her intelligently. She brought him a drink of cool water in an earthen vessel, with the drops oozing from its porous sides. The hut reeked with odors which met his nostrils at every breath he drew. He asked in Arabic: "Where am I?"

"In the hut of victory," said Fatou Anni.

Pitchoune overheard the voice and came to Sabron's side. His master murmured:

"Where are we, my friend?" The dog leaped on his bed and licked his face. Fatou Anni, with a whisk of straw, swept the flies from him. A great weakness spread its wings above him and he fell asleep.

Days are all alike to those who lie in mortal sickness. The hours are intensely colorless and they slip and slip and slip into painful wakefulness, into fever, into drowsiness finally, and then into weakness.

The Capitaine de Sabron, although he had no family to speak of, did possess, unknown to the Marquise d'Esclignac, an old aunt in the provinces, and a handful of heartless cousins who were indifferent to him. Nevertheless he clung to life and in the hut of Fatou Anni fought for existence. Every time that he was conscious he struggled anew to hold to the thread of life. Whenever he grasped the thread he vanquished, and whenever he lost it, he went down, down.

Fatou Anni cherished him. He was a soldier who had fallen in the battle against her sons and grandsons. He was a man and a strong one, and she despised women. He was her prey and he was her reward and she cared for him; as she did so, she became maternal.

His eyes which, when he was conscious, thanked her; his thin hands that moved on the rough blue robe thrown over him, the devotion of the dog—found a responsive chord in the great-grandmother's heart. Once he smiled at one of the naked, big-bellied great-grandchildren. Beni Hassan, three years old, came up to Sabron with his fingers in his mouth and chattered like a bird. This proved to Fatou Anni that Sabron had not the Evil Eye. No one but the children were admitted to the hut, but the sun and the flies and the cries of the village came in without permission, and now and then, when the winds arose, he could hear the stirring of the palm trees.

Sabron was reduced to skin and bone. His nourishment was insufficient, and the absence of all decent care was slowly taking him to death. It will never be known why he did not die.

Pitchoune took to making long excursions. He would be absent for days, and in his clouded mind Sabron thought the dog was reconnoitering for him over the vast pink sea without there—which, if one could sail across as in a ship, one would sail to France, through the walls of mellow old Tarascon, to the chateau of good King Rene; one would sail as the moon sails, and through an open window one might hear the sound of a woman's voice singing. The song, ever illusive and irritating in its persistency, tantalized his sick ears.

Sabron did not know that he would have found the chateau shut had he sailed there in the moon. It was as well that he did not know, for his wandering thought would not have known where to follow, and there was repose in thinking of the Chateau d'Esclignac.

It grew terribly hot. Fatou Anni, by his side, fanned him with a fan she had woven. The great-grandchildren on the floor in the mud fought together. They quarreled over bits of colored glass. Sabron's breath came panting. Without, he heard the cries of the warriors, the lance-bearers—he heard the cries of Fatou Anni's sons who were going out to battle. The French soldiers were in a distant part of the Sahara and Fatou Anni's grand-children were going out to pillage and destroy. The old woman by his side cried out and beat her breast. Now and then she looked at him curiously, as if she saw death on his pale face. Now that all her sons and grandsons had gone, he was the only man left in the village, as even boys of sixteen had joined the raid. She wiped his forehead and gave him a potion that had been pierced with arrows. It was all she could do for a captive.

LOOKS LIKE EXTRA CONGRESS SESSION WILL BE NECESSARY

Believed Impossible for Congress to Finish Its Business.

PROBABLY IN JUNE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.—An extraordinary session of the next congress before next summer will be imperative, according to present indications.

President Wilson is going to arrive on the Washington scene next month only to find that the congress which expires March 4 next has been making little headway in disposing of the mass of legislation on which he expects action at this session.

The president departing and Mr. McAdoo and others resigning left behind a multitude of tasks for congress to perform. With a perversion, not without a trace of irony, congress reciprocated by devoting attention largely to unbidden subjects, such for example as the peace conference and Wilsonian policies, domestic and foreign.

Little Headway Made. The result is that with barely five weeks of the session remaining scarcely any headway has been made on the disposition of legislation. When the president arrives there will be not more than a fortnight of the session left, and it is fully expected that he will appear at the capitol with a demand for instant action on a number of matters.

Even under the presidential spur it will be impossible to dispose of more than a fraction of the legislation required unless both houses are willing to pass bills with their eyes shut, as Democratic Leader Kitchin once proposed.

Important Work Waiting. Here are the most important matters pending:

All of the appropriation bills, none of which has been passed and some of the most important of which have not been considered by the house, where they must originate.

Adoption of a naval policy in connection with Secretary Daniels' proposal to build the largest navy in the world.

Adoption of a military policy in connection with the imperative necessity of providing at least a regular and with the demobilization of the present emergency army.

Disposition of the railroads, the administration having threatened to return them to their owners under the old chaotic conditions unless congress accedes to the McAdoo recommendation of a five-year extension of government control.

Just Fix Wire Policy.

Disposition of the telegraph and telephone systems in the face of vigorous efforts of the administration to retain them under government operation.

Prohibition of immigration for four years, a measure which will arouse extensive debate.

Stabilization of the price of wheat under the terms of the bill appropriating $1,250,000,000 to set the government up in the grain business.

Battle For Senate Control.

Almost any one of the measures would be sufficient to consume the entire time of the session. In addition the Democratic leaders, moved to desperate tactics in their efforts to wrest control of the next senate from the Republicans are preparing to bring before the senate the contest of Henry Ford for the seat to which Commander Newberry was elected.

It is evident that much important legislation will be neglected by this congress and the president will be confronted with the question of calling the new congress into session. There will be need of such an extra session immediately after March 4.

It is doubted, however, that Mr. Wilson will call a special session so soon. He wants to go back to Europe immediately after March 4 and it is believed he would see no advantage in summoning, before going, a Republican congress.

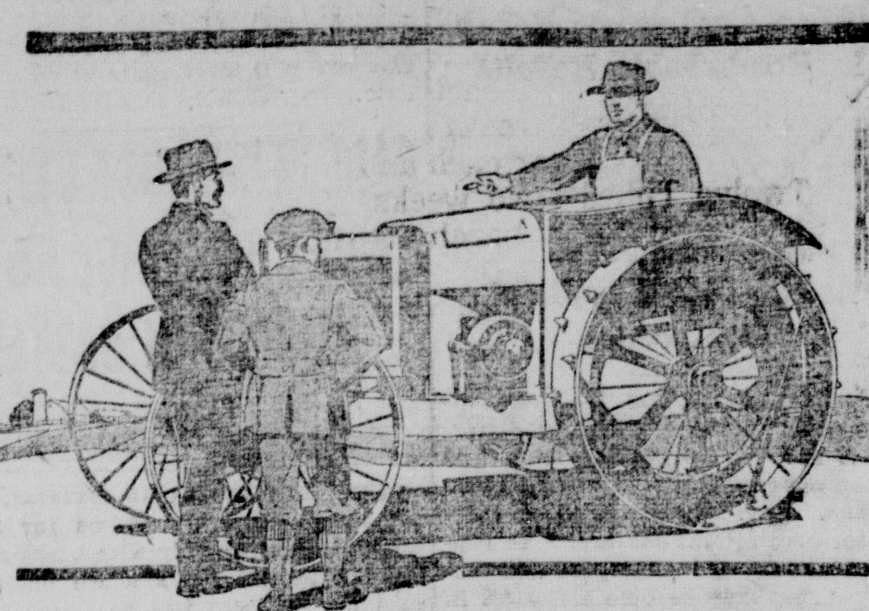

Ratify Peace in June?

Far more likely is it that the president after staying abroad until the conclusion of the peace negotiations, will return to Washington, call an extra session, possibly in June, and present the peace treaty for ratification by the senate, together with a report of his stewardship at the council of the nations.

PARRETT 12-25 TRACTOR

There Is Actual Evidence of Parrett Producing Power

FOR five years the steadfast Parrett has pulled three plows, harvested relentlessly when crops hung in the balance and cut the cost of threshing and other power chores on some thousands of farms under conditions equal to, or more difficult than those in our neighborhood. It has proved by years of experience that it can produce increased crops and increased profit.

What interests us around here is the Parrett knack of working with one man or with one boy—because it is so simple in construction, so easy to operate that a boy can run it just as efficiently and just as steadily as a man.

What interests us too, is its sensitive governor that Hooverizes fuel at every shift of the speed, making it impossible to use more fuel than is needed for the job.

It is ideal motor power and with one tenth trouble and petting that you have been giving your horses, it will out-earn, out-produce and out-last its money's worth of horse flesh.

Come in and get the nose of a thorough-bred tractor. Bring your pencil and paper and figure out its five-year proven facts. This year we want to see you farm with Parrett power.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hoyle and family visited Wednesday evening at the Frank Becker home and had the pleasure of listening to the interesting accounts of life "over there," as told by Donald Becker, who recently returned from the front. He was wounded in the hand while in action and although unable to use his hand, stayed with his company until the next day, when he was ordered to the hospital. He says that water was so scarce he could not find any to wash his hand. He brought back with him a good many interesting relics—money from different countries, a French thimble, a cross with two cross-bars, such as they use in Alsace Lorraine, and some buttons cut from a German's coat. Don says the best thing he saw while over there was when some Americans would capture a German machine gun and turn it on the fleeing Germans. On one occasion a bunch of Germans had taken refuge in a clump of bushes. The American boys turned the gun on the bushes, but the first shot went high. The second, however, sent the Germans scattering and at the third shot they all left their cover and ran.

Paul Becker, who has been stationed at Fort Sheridan, arrived unexpectedly last Thursday night. He walked home in the middle of the night, crept quietly into the house and upstairs without waking anyone. He was considerably surprised, himself, to find Don, whose arrival he had not heard of, in his bed, but he turned in and slept till morning, when Don was equally surprised.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it deters so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ANOTHER DIXON CASE

It Proves That There's A Way Out for Many Suffering Dixon Folks.

Just another report of a case in Dixon. Another typical case. Kidney ailments relieved in Dixon with Doan's Kidney Pills.

G. Sieling, 1206 W. Sixth street, says: "I have been a stone mason for several years and it has been pretty hard on my back at times. I blame the heavy lifting for my kidney trouble. One day while lifting a stone, I was suddenly seized with a sharp, shooting pain across my back. I kept going from bad to worse and was laid up for a month, unable to work. My kidneys were in terrible shape and I had to get up at night to pass the secretions and they contained a brick dust-like sediment. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me. I have no need of a kidney medicine now, as Doan's have made a permanent cure."
